Landlords, Will and Vicki marry at the Beer Engine

William and Victoria married on 27th July and what an event it was. More than 270 guests enjoyed a very moving ceremony as well musical and magical entertainment, along with a delicious feast and oodles to drink. The cake tasted as good as it looked and was made by the bride.

The ceremony was conducted by Maggie Whitehouse a local humanist celebrant. Her presentation was excellent and witty and all the guests appreciated the sentiments expressed and came away with the important knowledge that they, friends and family, also have responsibilities towards the newly-weds.

As the only other couple to have been married in the Beer Engine, Jill and I were particularly pleased and honoured to have been invited. We were married there in 1999 when we had the pub. There were a number of similarities between the two events. Will and Ian, the brewer, produced a celebration beer which was remarkably similar to that we produced and they gave it the same name, Golden Coupling. It was delicious. Another similarity was that Chloe, maid of honour, gave us an excellent rendition of an extract from "Winnie the Pooh". Twenty years ago our children read extracts from "Winnie the Pooh".

We were brilliantly entertained by a Steel band from Birmingham, Shaun Moon produced his magic and during the evening music and dancing was supplied by A.B.Y.. The music was excellent as demonstrated by the enthusiastic dancing. Band members Jo and Simeon Taylor are both members of the team who serve and look after you so well in the pub.

Do You Remember?.....September

September 1979

The Mothers Union will meet on 19th September in the church when the Rev Kenneth Arther will be recounting his days as a chaplain at Holloway Prison. Devon County Council has made a grant of £105 to Newton St Cyres in recognition and enterprise which went into the project of creating the new school path. The Parish Council received a letter from the Head Postmaster Exeter asking for comments on the village Post Office closing on Wednesday afternoons. The council had no objection to the change of hours.

September 1989

The Parish Council said that South West Water are considering erecting stand pipes unless the weather changes. The Church Group have agreed to purchase a modern photocopier for use of all six churches and for anyone in the area. The Young Farmers Club hosted members from Winchcombe YFC in Gloucester to a weekend in Devon. They visited Babbacombe, Dartmoor, Beer Caves and were given a farm walk around Winscott Barton.

September 1999

A message from Crediton police warned house holders to be vigilant as overnight two and a half granite mushrooms were stolen from the front garden of a bungalow in Langford road. The Recreation Ground report that all football friendlies have been played and the various league matches have started. This month is also the start of indoor league games, with darts, pool and skittles. All are invited to watch.

September 2009

The Line Dancing Group, who meet on Tuesday evenings in the parish Hall, reported being a very social group of like-minded people. They would welcome newcomers of any age or ability. New activities and groups would be set up in the village as a result of the Parish Plan. They would include a history society, yoga or palates, a gardening group and a photography club. Anyone interested in participating was invited to a meeting at the Parish Hall on 9th September. The Table Tennis Group was keen to encourage new members and would hold an Open Evening on 18th September for a free taster session.

Newbrooke Ward Report from Graeme Barnell

Road and Cycle Way improvements

I've been continuing work to get improvements in road safety, including highway improvements along and adjacent to the A377, and to reduce the need for car use and journeys. Many local people share my belief that we cannot continue with road traffic dividing and dominating our communities in the way it now does. We need safer road crossing points, more pavements, and dedicated cycle ways.

I am aiming to get a local highways and transport plan agreed by Devon County Council and the parish councils. I hope this will give us a way forward with the large number of road and transport issues that have been waiting for progress. It should help the local authorities involved to respond to requests for action from local people.

In July I met with officers from Devon County Council and County Councillor Margaret Squires, together with Roger Cashmore, Newton St Cyres Parish Councillor. I am meeting them again in September to discuss how to get this plan done. Like all such plans, it will need to be costed with a timetable for implementation. It will also need to be the subject of discussion and consultation with local people. If you have views or proposals, please let me know.

Twenty is Plenty

Some residents along West Town Lane and in Sweetham have told me they want to see a change in speed limits in their locality. They are concerned that 30mph is too fast in narrow country lanes where people live, walk and where children play. They know that this takes time to achieve so they are also asking for informal "Twenty is Plenty" signs along the roads that are causing concern. I agree with this, but, before I take this up, I need to ensure that it has the support of most people in these localities. Starting in West Town Lane and West Town in September, I will be putting a letter in mailboxes, asking for your views. Please do your best to answer my questions and return the letter to me.

Langford Lorry Traffic

Residents of Langford are asking for action because their lives are being badly affected by a large volume of heavy lorry traffic through their village. I've been working with Devon County Councillor Margaret Squires to in an attempt improve matters.

Climate emergency

I am interested in setting up a local Climate Emergency Action Group. The idea is to bring local people together to: -

- Share information about good practice and other local schemes aimed at reducing greenhouse gases.
- Plan local action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.
- Engage with local authorities, businesses and local people to reduce carbon release.

Are you interested? Please let me know.

RECREATION GROUND CLUB

Looking at the diary I have to accept that we are heading fast toward autumn, as I have confirmed bookings for skittles and the ladies darts, through to March next year. Looks like the Devon and Exeter League will only release one month's dates at a time. The first team for Newtown has been promoted into the New Devon League and their league has released three months' fixtures, so fingers crossed. This will form the pattern for the whole season. The skittles dates include dates for two cup games and the league dates, so hopefully we don't end up with them getting changed at the last minute because other venues had to pull out of their dates. The ladies darts dates are also for cup and league. The men's darts league have a meeting this weekend and hopefully their completed list will get to me in the next week so I can get them in the diary.

The Tennis Club are hoping to hold a training evening for using the defibrillator. The importance of this was brought home when a visiting player collapsed and was revived by the use of the machine outside the clubhouse. It is one sure way to focus the minds of those that saw it used correctly.

The Archery Group have their last week of mid week practice in the first week of September. They continue to practise on Sunday through the winter months.

We have our next meeting on Sunday 8th September at 7.30.

Social events over the weekend of 20th 21st and 22nd September will be very interesting, especially for those of you with an interest in motor bikes. As the Bike Show returns for a second visit to the Rec, we are hoping that the weather is kinder to them this year as it rained most of the weekend they were with us last year. Staying with social events, at the end of September we have a family party. We like to be able to facilitate families for their events. This month (August) we had a wake for an elderly village resident. The club house is here for the residents to use. If you need a date and place to have a celebration, ring me on Exeter 432287

The beginning of September means our summer league matches are now completed. We run six adult teams in the summer and our Ladies A team is currently second in Division 1.

Once again, we enjoyed lovely weather for our Club Finals Day, with some entertaining and exciting matches, especially the mixed doubles, which was fought very closely, with a third set tiebreak, and a final score of 5:7 6:4 10:7. Congratulations to all involved – winners and players.

Junior coaching will be starting again on Wednesday afternoons and evenings from the beginning of September with our coach Toby Harradence. Devon and Cornwall

Devon & Cornwall Police

Action Fraud has received 63 reports about a scam in which fraudsters target people with offers of “low cost” loans or “free” government grants. What the victims aren’t told is that the money they’ll receive is actually an advance payment for Universal Credit. The criminals use the personal information they’ve obtain under false pretences to make an application in the victim’s name. After the fraudsters have taken their “fee” from the advance payment, the victim is then left to pay back the total amount once their repayments begin.

How you can protect yourself:

- Never share your personal or financial information with someone you don’t know and trust, especially if it’s in response to an offer of “free money” or a “free grant”.
- Department for Work & Pensions (DWP) staff will never approach you in the street or ask for your personal/financial details over social media.
- If you have concerns about your benefits, you should visit www.gov.uk/contact-jobcentre-plus
- If you suspect your identity may have been stolen, you can check your credit rating quickly and easily online. You should do this every few months anyway, using a reputable service provider and following up on any unexpected or suspicious results.

Bert Jewell writes Rhymes and Ways about Gardens and Gardening

September

Helping in the garden whilst still a young lad,
Sometimes the weather would drive father mad,
A spring far too wet for sowing the seed,
How quickly the garden would get covered in weed.

So, as the summer fades, the shortening days,
How growing has changed, in so many ways,
From the time I planted my first ever pea and before school each morning would nip out to see.

If my pea was growing, there was no sign yet,
It was early winter, the ground cold and wet.
It's the wrong time of year, said father to me,
Plant them in the spring and then you will see.

I've learnt a lot since those early days,
how to grow and harvest in different ways and from friends at school, I became more aware that farmers grow lots of the food that we share.

They're up very early, at the start of each day to milk the cows and cut the hay.
To harvest the wheat for our morning toast, fields of potatoes for our Sunday roast.

Cauliflower, cabbage, turnips and swede,
all grown to perfection from a tiny seed,\.
So thanks to the growers and harvesters of crops,
that fill up the shelves in the markets and shops.

Ways to grow spring cabbage, onions and broad beans

It's always nice to have some home-grown veg during the spring before the main summer crops are ready, and, with a little care and a mild winter, we can.

Let's start with spring cabbage. The seeds are best sown from mid July to mid August, so if you haven't sown yours yet, look for a few plants in a garden centre or shop. Find a sunny spot in the garden or allotment and remove all the weeds. If the soil has not been turned for a while, remove the weed by gently hoeing, leaving the ground firm and consolidated. Don't add any fertilizer to the soil as the plants need to grow slowly during the winter.

The heads of spring cabbage are usually conical in shape and smaller than summer varieties. So they can be planted 1ft apart in rows 18in apart. A good hardy variety to try is "Offenham - Flower of Spring", which can be harvested during April and May.

Another veg to grow over winter is onions, but unlike the cabbage, onions will do better if an application of fertilizer is added to the soil about two weeks before planting. Growmore is a good balanced fertilizer. Cut off any old brown leaves from the sets before planting. Birds think these are worms and will pull out the sets. Plant the sets during September or early October, so that the neck is just showing above the ground in rows 6in to 8in apart and 4in to 6in between sets. Varieties to plant are "Ailsa Craig", "Solidity" or one of the Japanese varieties. Crops can be harvested late June early July.

Another veg I like to grow is broad beans. They will grow well in rich soil that does not become waterlogged and is not too acid. Aquadulce is for me the best variety to plant in the autumn. They are hardy and good for putting in the freezer.

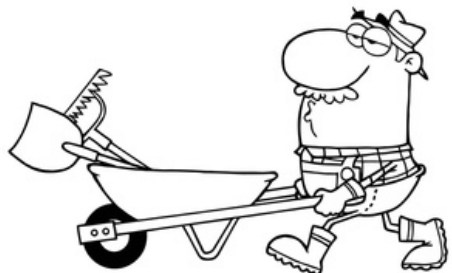

I always plant mine in cells and then plant them out in double rows when they are about 3in high. If you plant the seed directly into the soil, it should be 2in deep. If you stand the seed on its end in the planting hole it will allow water to run off rather than sit on the side. It is best not to plant them too early, as they could become leggy and suffer frost damage. I plant out ours at the end of October. Once each plant has set five or six flowers, the growing tip can be pinched out. This will help the developing pods and also deter blackfly.

Plant of the month

"Callicarpa Profusion"

This is one of those shrubs that is just there in the garden, with its green leaves doing nothing, then autumn arrives and suddenly it comes alive. The leaves turn a vivid orange and red, coinciding with the clusters of small purple berries. These will remain on the small branches long after all the leaves have fallen. It needs well drained soil in sun or light shade. For best results, plant two.

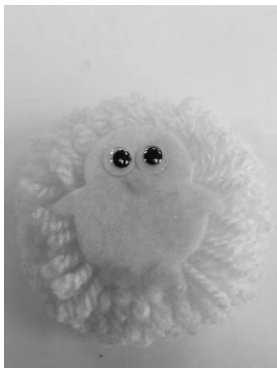

Enjoy your gardening

NEWTON ST CYRES HISTORY GROUP

On Wednesday May 15th we had our long awaited talk from James Clark, Professor of History at Exeter University. James Clark is a distinguished medieval historian and very well qualified to tell us about our village in 1407/8, as recorded in the Rental of Devon Manors held by Plympton Priory. His title was 'Plympton Priory and Newton St Cyres : Lordship and Tenancy in a Monastic Manor', and his aim was to show us a snapshot of medieval Newton St Cyres. Firstly he gave us a description of the Priory, as a necessary background, and then he went into the details of how the manor of Newton would have been organised.

Plympton Priory was an Augustinian foundation and Prof. Clark stressed how different their approach was from other monastic orders. Augustinians interacted with the community and were not a closed order like, for example, the Benedictines or the Cistercians. Their head was called a prior and the members of the order were called canons; they took slightly different vows from other monks. At its foundation in 1133 Plympton had a prior and 40 + canons, and its favourable position on good land helped make it one of the richer monastic foundations out of the nearly 900 in England at the time. Unusually, this was a position it maintained up to the Dissolution, even though the Black Death of 1348-51 reduced the number of canons to twenty, this staying roughly the same until the end of the monastic system under Henry VIII. For the four hundred years of its existence, Plympton Priory acted as the centre for canons ministering in various communities, most in the surrounding area but some, like our village, much further away. Prof. Clark made the significant point that even in the C12th this area was still a frontier zone for the Anglo-Norman rulers. It was only 67 years after the Norman Conquest and the infrastructure of the parish system had not fully developed. This meant that the presence of the canons in the communities was particularly useful for the main church administration.

Plympton Priory took on the manor of Newton St Cyres in 1151, all the land that they held being that to the south of the River Creedy. In modern terms, Prof. Clark explained, the Priory could be regarded as a significant and large corporate business with Newton St Cyres as one of its small enterprises. The values are interesting, and those cited were from 1535, at the Dissolution. In total, Plympton was worth £931.4½d per annum, and Newton St Cyres was worth £61.16s. 10½d per annum (this being the sum of the Temporal value of £46.16s. 10 ½d plus the Spiritual value of £15). Temporal value was income from the lands and estates and Spiritual Value was from the church income.

The management of Newton St Cyres, which was geographically distant, was made easier by the existence of a 'cell' at Marsh Barton. The cell was a small local base run by the Priory and it seems that in those days, Marsh Barton was probably a rough area, outside the jurisdiction of the city. There is a record of a prior there who was attacked by a man coming in from Alphington. The prior, significantly, was armed and stabbed the man with his dagger, so it seems that he was not unused to trouble and was prepared to defend himself.

In 1338 the church here at Newton was 'appropriated' to Plympton. This was not unusual and meant that a priest in charge would be placed there and thus the greater part of the income from the church would go to the Priory. It seems that Archbishop Grandisson, allowed this because it meant that the bishopric, which was always poor in Exeter, would not have to take on the costs of jurisdiction and Newton was thus no longer an expense. ('So many monasteries drew funds from the parish churches in their ownership that parishioners were resentful as they saw the resources of their own parish community drained away. The different perspective this places on the Dissolution is that it was not necessarily the spectacle of a rich monastery that was a source of grievance but the deliberate impoverishment of parishes on their behalf.' JC)

By 1407/8, the time of the Rental, it seems that the Priory was in debt. Possible things were being badly run, and certainly the effects of the Black Death were still being felt as they were all over the country. Empty holdings, due to the lack of tenants who had died in the continuing outbreaks of the disease, meant no rents, and a loss of income. For Newton, an outlying manor, there is a suggestion that management was not as good as it might have been. However, generally Prof. Clark noted, monasteries were benign landlords and did not press tenants too hard, even undercharging them in order to protect their assets.

Prof. Clark's analysis of the Rental broke down the property of Newton in 1407/8 into the types of land, the infrastructure and dwellings, and the types of land holding.

The land was categorised as plough land, pasture, garden, and lastly, in a cluster at the end of the document, marsh. It is relevant that woodland is not mentioned, because it was so valuable that the landlords would protect it closely. Tenants did not have rights to take timber or graze animals or use it or its products. Plough land and pasture land are self-explanatory. Garden would not be decorative in any way, as it was a source of fruit and vegetables, in the sense of a modern market garden. Marsh land may have been more valuable than at first appears. The river valley was quite wet, but water meadows were valuable and there may have been plans for drainage, which would improve the land.

The infrastructure refers to the corn mill, the fulling mill and to building plots. The dwellings would mostly have been cottages, and it is striking that there is evidence of new building going on here at the time.

Land holdings were described as ferlings and unitary acreages. A ferling was a standard land measurement and it is a quarter of a virgate. A virgate is 30 acres and so a ferling was around 7 acres. However, it is estimated that 10 acres is the standard amount of land needed to survive on a subsistence level and so if you had a ferling, and one or two isolated (unitary) acres, you would have been on the very edge of subsistence. Furthermore, it is harder to manage scattered acreages and so in a small manor like Newton, people would have been very keen to get hold of any land that was vacated for whatever reason, to try to amalgamate their holdings.

Your land tenure was held in various ways; by Knight Service, Convention or Custom. Knight Service had meant you would have to bear arms and fight for your lord, but by 1407 this was commuted to a cash payment. Conventional holdings were for the tenant's life only, but Customary tenants were heritable and could go to a widow or a second generation. The evidence is that Plympton was keen to encourage a relatively high level of security for its tenants, and this indicates a stable situation.

There were some levels of authority within the tenant system. If you were a tithingman you were delegated some powers from your feudal lord, and you were responsible for ten tenants, rather like a C20th shop steward, but it was not a given that this position could be handed down the generations, as Plympton did not want to lose command within the manor. The Reeve of the Hundred had to ensure that rents and services were paid on time. The duty of Inspector of Carcasses speaks for itself!

Of course, under the Manorial System, tenants owed various duties and obligations to the landlord. You had to pay homage to your lord, and twice a year you had to go to court to prove your land tenure. You had to harrow, plough and harvest the lord's land. You had to perform carriage of goods over land and water and pay your rents and commuted knight's service. You had to use the lord's corn mill. This was expensive and so people would try to avoid paying by using a hand mill at home. This resulted in quite a lot of trouble and efforts to enforce the use of the proper mill. Linked to this was the duty to perform 'bedum molendium' which was a requirement to maintain the wooden channel of the mill race, just as it channelled to go over to the wheel.

The year was divided by halves and quarters by which times various services and fees had to be completed. The year end was Michaelmas, 29th September, the half year was Candlemas, 2nd February, and the quarters were Christmas, Easter, the Feast of St John the Baptist, 24th June, and Michaelmas 29th September.

In summary, Prof. Clark described a peasant community but one with some social stratification. Newton St Cyres was not a stagnant place. Services were moving towards cash transactions and there was some mobility, in that families with means could move to vacant tenancies and build new dwellings. The place names attached to the people shows that there were incomers, around a third of the 60-70 tenants, coming in to what was an evolving community. The distant landlord did not exert a stifling control over the village and the manor's economy was turning over well, with no vacant tenancies.

It felt a privilege to have heard Prof. Clark explain the detail of religious, administrative and legal systems in 1407 in our area, and put Newton St Cyres into the context of the times. His talk was both refreshing and challenging, well- illustrated and explained, and we are most grateful to him for sharing with us his work and knowledge.

Sin and Salvation: Medieval Roof Bosses in Newton St Cyres and their Context

An Illustrated Talk by Sue Andrew

9th October 2019 commencing at 7:30pm
IN THE CHURCH(not the Parish Hall)

This is a unique and exciting opportunity to hear the expert on Devon bosses, in our church with the new up-lighting bringing our own bosses to light!

The medieval roofs of Newton St Cyres church contain some rare pre-Reformation imagery carved in oak bosses. Sue's talk will consider this rich legacy and will place these carvings in their medieval decorative, social, and religious context, showing images both familiar and unfamiliar, including the Three Hares and the Green Man.

And a few words about the speaker:

Sue Andrew's studies at Edinburgh and Plymouth universities have included anthropology, sociology, art history, and architectural conservation. Her doctoral thesis focused on the medieval oak carvings of men and beasts, including the Green Man and the Three Hares, found in the roofs of the churches of Devon. Sue has supported several churches recently in their quest to discover more about their carvings and has written, and photographed, for reports, guidebooks and interpretation panels.

NEWTON ST CYRES GARDENING CLUB

With August, and holidays away, now behind us we look forward to the return of our evening meetings.

Our first will be on Wednesday 4th September when Steve Adams from Homeleigh Garden Centre will be coming to speak to the Club. Steve visited the Club last year and we look forward to his return when he will be telling us about the advantages of buying plants from a local garden centre, and plans for the Crediton Centre. All are welcome to attend this meeting, which will be held in the Club Room of the Parish Hall, commencing at 7.30pm. Tea, Coffee and Biscuits will be served prior to the start of the meeting and the cost for the meeting is just £2.00

Also in September, Joyce and her team will be holding their weekly Meat Bingo in the Parish Hall, and on Monday 30th September this will be a fundraiser for the Gardening Club.

It would be lovely to see as many of you there as possible to support this event (eyes down at 7.30pm) We also hold a raffle at the Bingo to raise additional funds and prizes are requested from attendees of the Gardening Club, for this. Please bring these either on the night of 30th or let Nicola, Chris, Jane or Rosemary have them at the evening meeting on 4th September. All funds raised help cover the cost of speakers for next year. If you have any suggestions for topics for the 2020 programme, please let us know.

The colourful photo was taken at the Taunton Flower Show held at Vivary Park at the start of August. This was one of the nurseries gardens, portraying 'Flower Power' - and yes we did end up buying several plants at the end of show sell off. This made for a very floral journey back to Exeter, in the car!! A particular favourite was Verbena officinalis var. grandiflora 'Bampton' (common name vervain 'Bampton'), which can be seen in the middle of the other photograph.

Upton Pyne's September Garden Club meeting is on Monday 16th September when Carol Lewis from the RSPB will be speaking on Devon Birds. The meeting starts at 7.30pm in their Parish Hall and admission is £3.00

September on the Farm

NATURE

Rich golden autumn days cling on to summer warmth like imminent parting from a dear friend: yearned for, knowing it will end. Warmth seeps into apples in the orchard, ripening each one in turn. Pick them fresh off the tree. They are ripe when they come off with half a turn. Another way to tell if they are ripe is when the wasps start nibbling them, leaving little saw marks in the flesh. But, be careful. It's not so good to take a bite from an apple and realise you are sharing it with a wasp. Leave till hurricane-driven gales hit our shores and the apples lie, a cidery ruin, trampled underfoot. Picked just right into 1 tonne boxes, we send them off to Sandford Orchards to make into juice and cider. We get the apple pomace back to feed the cows. The cows are very keen on the slightly alcoholic pressed apple pulp. You can catch an appley flavour in the cheese made from this milk.

ARABLE

Just the maize is left to be harvested. This will be perhaps be the last time we grow this remarkable energy-rich crop. It grows from seed in April or May, knee high by the 4th of July, flowers in August and fills its cobs in September. The problem for us is that it needs ploughing, stirring up the soil and volatilising organic matter. Even if we plant a crop after harvest, the soil is bare for some of the vulnerable times of year. We'd rather work the soil less hard, and grow and feed the cows on red clover, which stays in the ground longer and fixes nitrogen from the air and leaves organic matter in the soil.

GRASS

Last month's deluges restored the grass growth. Now we aren't battling the grass's desire to set seed. It's back to leaf growing until next summer.

We take advantage of the seasonal lift in leafy growth to feed the fresh-calved cows. They had their summer holidays when grass growth reduced for the summer. After they calve, they need to eat more to produce milk, and there it is with the autumn flush. That's the theory, anyway. Like all natural systems, we rely on seasonal predictability. Weather extremes disturb the orderly dance. The excess carbon dioxide in the air that is causing the problems with climate comes in part from volatilising organic matter from the soil. That's why we as farmers are starting to realise we must tuck as much organic matter back into the soil where it belongs. Helpfully that makes the soil work better and hold more moisture. Grass, as a perennial crop, puts organic matter back in the soil.

COWS

It's healthy for cows to calve out in the field, where sunshine provides sterilising services. When each cow's time comes, she chooses a secure nook, behind a tree or at the edge of the field, and gets on with her business undisturbed. In the main, as long as things are progressing normally, it's better to leave her alone. Our vigorous little cross-bred calves show their liveliness even before they are born and usually have their feet and heads pointed in the right direction (like a diver) so they come out without assistance. You'll find them standing up and suckling before anyone knew they were there.

DAIRY

We've put a viewing window into the cheese dairy so you can see in without the palaver of getting hairnetted, suited and booted. That means more people will be able to get an insight into what it takes to make cheese. We will also be running our first Academy of Cheese Level 1 course between the farm and the event room at Hanlons, the second craft brewery in the parish. This course gives a good grounding in how cheese is made and how it tastes. It's based on tasting 25 cheeses, each illustrating a different aspect of cheese making – as well as being some of the most delicious cheese on the planet. You can find out more on our website www.quickes.co.uk

PAIRING

On the course, we also talk about what you might pair cheese with. Cider is a really natural pairing, especially when made just down the road at Sandford Orchard's Crediton Cider Works, using apples from our orchards.

Sandford Orchards 'Devon Red' is a balanced, medium cider named after the rich red soil that gives the orchards their distinctive quality. Made from a mix of apples, including Farmers Glory and Sweet Alford, the acidity of this crisp and fruity cider perfectly cuts through the creaminess and gentle smokiness of our Oak Smoked Goat's Milk Cheese.

Their elderflower cider 'Old Blossom' goes with our Goat's Milk Clothbound Cheese, the aromatic notes teasing out the aromatics from the goat's milk.

'The General' is robust and full, with tannins and strength enough to match the full flavour of our Mature Clothbound Cheddar.

I also like their apple juice paired with our Devonshire Red with its lemony butteriness, to match the apple juice's sweet acidity.

July 31st Watercolour demonstration by David Norman

David has an international reputation as a watercolourist and the author of two books on watercolour painting. His studio is in Dittisham, S.Devon, where he runs courses for individuals and groups.

He told us that his style is influenced by Joseph Zbukvic with whom he has spent time painting. David's architectural training is clear in the skilled draughtsmanship he employs in his paintings, many of which are street scenes and cityscapes. But the overall effect is of contrast between light and shade, a loose style where objects, buildings and people are suggested with a few flicks of the brush, and a vitality that many of us long to achieve in our own watercolours.

He used a sketch done beforehand to illustrate his technique and pass on to us useful tips on working quickly, holding the brush loosely at the end, using a limited palette, taking risks, allowing happy accidents, not fiddling with details, not overworking, dealing with perspective, and above all, choosing what to paint. His advice was not to be beguiled by the attractiveness of a scene, which often doesn't work as a painting or as a photo; to think hard about the composition: what to include, what to leave out, and what to add that isn't actually there. He recommended doing lots of plein air sketching before deciding what to work up into a painting.

An entertaining and most informative evening.

THE SARAWAK REPORT

It's being called the theft of the century - billions of the Malaysian people's money gone missing during a 10-year binge. The scale of the wrongdoing and how it happened is exposed in meticulous and dramatic detail in a book by Clare Rewcastle Brown.

At great personal cost, including risk to her own safety and out of love for Sarawak, where she was born, Clare spent a decade investigating what's being going wrong at the highest level in Malaysia. From wanton environmental damage through the destruction of the country's forests to the unaccounted-for billions of the Malaysian people's savings. In doing so Clare uncovered the truth about how an elite at the top of the now-discredited government authorised and benefitted from downright immoral acts.

In the 'The Sarawak Report', Clare charts something more than rottenness at the core of one disreputable regime. She reveals the loopholes in our modern global economy and the flaws in our global financial and legal architecture that allow wrongdoing to flourish unchecked.

Clare's initiative to reach the rural heartlands of Sarawak, where there is no access to the internet, began with a blog about the abuses of the government, and her 'Sarawak Report' was followed by 'Radio Free Sarawak', which won her the One World Media Special Award from CNN in 2015.

It's very easy to be caught up with our busy daily lives and not think about what is happening on the other side of the planet. There are several references to religious context throughout this book with quotes such as 'Take no part in the unfruitful works of darkness, but instead expose them' - Ephesians, chapter 5 verse 11, and 'There is no peace, saith my God, for the wicked' - Isaiah chapter 57, verse 21.

At a time when our own domestic politics are in disarray, it's a reminder how important it is for there to be strength and integrity at the highest level and as the Chinese proverb says 'If the top beam is crooked, all the rest will not be straight'.
